One of Our Bombers Is Missing (continued)

Remnants of a young American fighter navigator's quarters. He was only 21 but he had devoted his life to many missions. Behind him he leaves these humble relics.

In silent array the neat empty uniforms hang above the neat empty beds in the barracks. At right, a technical sergeant's tent with service shelves, shower wings.

Pilot's belongings are packed by assistant quartermaster adjacent to airplane house in missing man's family. There are letters, clothes, snapshots, souvenirs, mementos. . .
